

Diánoia is led by an Editorial Committee formed by faculty of the Instituto de Investigaciones Filosóficas. Additionally, the journal has a board of international Editorial Advisors, an Editor, an Editorial Assistant, and an Editorial Administrator. The Editor — chosen from and by the members of the Editorial Committee— is in charge, together with the Editorial Assistant, of the day-to-day management of the journal.

Members of the Editorial Committee meet on a monthly basis during academic periods in order to evaluate submissions, find suitable reviewers and determine the contents of each issue. Peer reviewers are chosen according to the subjects addressed by the manuscripts. All submissions are judged for publication in the journal on the grounds of originality, quality, and contribution to the existing literature/debate to ensure the journal's tradition of excellence and innovation since its foundation in 1955.

Members of the Editorial Advisors board are honorary figures who represent their journal in their own communities, help us to set our editorial policy, and many times review articles or submit manuscripts of their own. They are all prestigious and well-known scholars in Spanish-language philosophical publications.

The Editorial Administrator ensures compliance with all legal requirements and oversees all duties for the production of the journal.